

BRUNO BESA'S VERDICT

I was extremely pleased to take part in the first World of Fine Wine tasting entirely dedicated to the wines of the Barbaresco DOCG area. I've been a long-term fan of these world-class wines, and I very much welcome any effort to promote their unsurpassed capability of providing refined, complex, and ageworthy wines, while still remaining excellent value for money. 2015 was a hot vintage, producing generous, full-bodied wines. I suspect the wines won't be the most long-lived, and yet the beloved Nebbiolo grape showcases its unique capability of maintaining freshness and fragrance even in such climatic conditions.
